Dear Doyle Detroit,

I was on the peer review panel for the Film in the Cities Grants last summer and had a chance to see your work, which I found very intriguing.

I'm now writing a regular film/video column for Dialogue: An Art Journal, which distributes nationally, though it's mostly about midwest art. I'd like to mention your work in my next column which is on midwest women doing witty and/or satiric work and wondered if you could send me a dupe of some of your video journals that would fit the theme (I realize that your overall work goes beyond those categories). Actually, the sample reel would be fine, but I'd also like to see more of your work too. VHS or Beta would be fine, and I can send the tape back within a week.

Also, I'd like to show 60-80 minutes worth of your work in a class I teach at Northwestern University in the Radio/TV/Film department on the history/aesthetics of video art this spring quarter. I alternate the course yearly with one on personal/diary/autobiographical film/video. Could you quote me a rental fee?

Best,
